

This was taken outside the Ullman Fine Arts Center near Santa Anita, Calif. What a night! I'd never seen so many hippies. Nice typo, hippies.

I don't know why I think this is so funny, but I do. I have been on CNBC, Country Music Television and others, so technically it is true, but it makes me feel like I belong on the QVC network or something.

This is what it's all about – so long as they spell the name right, who cares where one performs. Work is work!

Some buddies of mine set this up outside of Dayton, Ohio... Too funny. Nothing like seeing one's name in lights. Hopefully the drivers thought the sign referred to someone else.

A friend figured out a way to get a screen cap off the TV when my website was featured on the Wheel of Fortune as one of the puzzles. Wild – free advertising comes in strange packages!
